

The miracle that obeys you

I am going to be a man of character, because this will enable me to render the world the most useful service, because this will enable me to help build a better society to make a glorious India, and because only this will enable me to do the greatest good to myself, for without the strength of character nothing can be achieved in the material world or in the inner life of man.

I know that I have the ability this object which I have chosen as my definite purpose. I know that I can become a man of character, therefore, I will permit nothing to interfere with my doing so. I demand of myself persistent, aggressive and continuous action toward its attainment.

I will concentrate my mind upon this desire for five minutes daily, just before retiring at night and just after arising in the morning for the purpose of determining just how I shall proceed to transform this idea into reality.

I will succeed, because I believe in myself, I believe in the infinite power that is in me. I will read the teachings of Swami Vivekananda, for in them I shall find the seeds of this self-confidence, as also those of self-control, accurate thought, determination and also the ways of building character. As Swami Vivekananda is a bright figure standing for all these I will concentrate on his figure every day in such a manner that it will be embedded in the inmost recesses of my mind, so that it will always guide me toward my aim bringing me the fulfillment of my life which I will use for the good of mankind. I know this as the definite goal of my life.

May the infinite power that resides in me be of help to me so that I may realize the goal of my life.
